STRANGE SCENES IN THE COURT

theatrical episode as part of the case for his client.

Mrs. Conger resumed the witness stand when court opened this morning. She repeated but with great hesitation her statements of yesterday to the effect that she had not desired to see her husband since she went—or was "taken" as the case is stated on behalf of her husband—to the home of her parents on New Year's Day, being the day after her marriage.

But through the patient questioning of Mr. Lightfoot, she gradually made admissions to put such statements in a new light.

About her refusal to receive Conger's registered letter from the postman whom she met at the door she said:

"I did not tell him to return it to my husband, but to take to back to the postoffice, where I could get it myself when I was able to go out. My reason for not wanting to receive his letters was that I was not well enough to read them."

Questions regarding her marriage vow to take Conger for her husband and if she had answered the questions as to any impediment—quoted from the Episcopal marriage service in which she was married by Rev. Mr. Hall—were disallowed under objection by A. G. M. Robertson for the respondent.

"What do you mean in your letter to Mr. Conger, here you say, 'Be patient, everything will be all right?'" Mr. Lightfoot asked.

"I meant after all the trouble would be over," was the answer.

Asked her trouble she meant, Mrs. Conger mentioned her having to come into court. She declined to admit any other trouble.

Mr. Lightfoot, on objection that he was asking leading questions, admitted he was doing so but contended that in the circumstances he was justified under the statute. While he could not claim exactly that the witness, subpoenaed by himself was an adverse witness, yet it was evident to everybody in the courtroom—and every heart there yesterday "bled for the woman whose words were not the expression of her own thoughts." They were not her answers but the answers she was commanded to give by her father, Thomas W. Rawlins.

Concluding an impassioned address on those lines, Mr. Lightfoot renewed a proposal to the other side which he made yesterday. This was that Mr. and Mrs. Conger be permitted to talk their affairs over together, apart from Mr. Rawlins and his family, and then announce their decision whether they desired lovingly to live together as husband and wife, which, the attorney said, "would end these proceedings and settle the future of these people forever."

Accordingly he proposed that the court declare a recess for fifteen minutes and that Judge Robinson grant to Mr. and Mrs. Conger the use of his chambers, where they might retire alone and decide then and there whether they should live together as married people.

Mr. Robertson objected to the proposal as irregular.

"Judge Robinson stated that while he had not authority to order such a meeting, he would nevertheless grant a recess for ten minutes.

Mrs. Conger having just before stated that she would like to meet her husband, remained on the stand.

Miss Rawlins, her eldest sister, advanced across the room toward Mrs. Conger.

"Go and speak to your wife," Mr. Lightfoot said to Conger.

Mr. Conger stepped forward, when Miss Rawlins placed herself between the husband and wife.

Mr. Rawlins, who had been seated to the right of his counsel, then sprang to one side, where he could face Mrs. Conger, and extending his upraised hand in menacing attitude, shouted, as already stated, "Do you wish to speak to that man?"

"I said after 12 o'clock," Mrs. Conger exclaimed in weeping tones.

"I want to speak to the judge," she was also heard to say.

Conger then stepped back and allowed his wife to pass him, supported and led out by her two sisters. Mr. Rawlins left with his daughters, guarding the rear.

Deputy Attorney General Andrews was called to the stand after the court resumed and testified as an eyewitness of the scene at recess. He stated that Rawlins, after shouting to his daughter, went around by the rear of the bar seats and, the witness thought, looked as if he meant to strike Conger.

"You seem to have been the most excited one in the room," Mr. Robertson taunted the witness.

"Yes, I will admit I was excited," Mr. Andrews retorted. "Anybody with red blood would have been excited."

D. Logan being called testified that the manner of Mr. Rawlins, when he addressed his daughter, was "exciting and threatening."

CHANGEATORPHEUM

The Doone-Golden aggregation will have an entire new bill at the Orpheum tonight. Jack Golden the inimitable, will put on one of his good numbers, the popular soubrettes and the chorus will appear in new songs and dances. Dick Stead will again sing himself in to favor and Allen Doone and pretty Edna Kelley will appear in "A Kerry Courtship." A good program from the opening number to the finale.

CANNOT VACCINATE

"Vaccination is impossible legally under the present law," said a local physician.

"The law provides for use only of a certain kind of 'points,' obtainable only in France, and at present none of them are to be had.

"If we had smallpox, physicians would have to violate the law and vaccinate with such vaccine as they could get. The law—a new one—is absurd."

LOCAL HUI SENDS CENSUS MAN TO THE PHILIPPINES

Alfred Finley Thayer, author of "The Forest Empire," formerly a local reporter, and latterly assistant to Dr. Clark, the census chief, has resigned his position as census assistant and expects to leave for the Philippines this afternoon in the S. S. Korea, if he can make connections, or rather if he can close business matters in time. He goes to the Philippines as local representative of a hui or company to investigate land and investment conditions in the Philippines.

ADAM BEDE

To be Presented in Condensed Interpretative Dramatization Tuesday.

Miss Mabelle Biggart who will appear at the opera house on Tuesday night and give a condensed interpretative dramatization of Adam Bede, one of George Eliot's greatest works, has met with wonderful success wherever she has appeared. If press notices are to be relied upon.

Her manner is forceful, her enunciation clear and her voice musical. From the moment she begins until the book is finished she holds the attention of her audiences. The house should be full on Tuesday night when Miss Biggart will make her initial bow to a Honolulu audience for, in addition to hearing something excellently done, a portion of the proceeds will be donated to the central committee of the anti-tuberculosis league, so the audience will serve and be served.
